

Building Sexual Tension via TSADC

2011

Yeah, I know, what on Earth is TSADC. Nothing fancy, it just stands for "the supply and demand concept".

Plus I happen to like awkwardly long acronyms. I've seen worse...like 20+ letters that don't spell out anything like:

N.I.I.O.M.T.P.L.A.B.O.P.A.R.M.B.E.T.Z.H.E.L.B.E.T.R.A.B.S.B.O.M.O.N.I.M.O.N.K.O.N.O.T.D.T.E.
K.H.S.T.R.O.M.O.N.T.

(And yes, that's real!)

What really gets me is when you see people involved in serious organizations where they dismiss the real spelling of the shortened version. For example, something like Fathers Against Radical Terrorism and you see them walking around in bunches wearing the same T-shirts - standing at the podium with a bullhorn.

Ok, let's move on to a serious way you can build sexual tension.

By the way, in my brief Google research for the worlds largest acronym, I found the one above [N.I.I.O.....] I also ran across this:

netlingo® www.netlingo.com

LMSO

Laughing My Socks Off

An acronym or text message used in online chat, IM, e-mail, blogs, or newsgroup postings.

Click on "more info" below!

Does anyone actually use that one? LMAO!

Let's move (for real this time).

In terms of creating sexual tension - and by that I mean, doing something that moves her closer to being aroused, the very first step is to have sexual value.

I know you've heard it a million times, but without SV, building tension becomes more difficult (in some cases, pointless).

Sexual Value (SV) - How sexually desirable you are to a particular woman.

Plus, having lots of SV can be thought of as an ongoing Sexual Tension tactic.

But for this report, we're going to explore new things associated with sexual tension (just when you think everything has been covered).

Just in case you don't know, increasing sexual tension is based on what you say and what you do.

It's based on messages.

For example if you wanted to send her the message that you are happy, you could smile (your actions) or you could say I'm happy (direct communication) or you could say something that reveals that you are happy. For example. "Wow! Isn't life great?" (indirect communication)...

You can use those same 3 channels (at the appropriate times) for building sexual tension (and increasing SV) in specific ways based on what tactics you know.

Of course, for this report we're going to stick with covering Sexual Tension. And we're going to go into massive detail with one of the easiest ways to build sexual tension...

...via TSADC!

Talking to lots of guys about this, I've noticed -- and this is REALLY important to pay attention to -- that the guys who make impressive improvements (and in some cases, pretty quickly) UNDERSTAND THE CONCEPT of sexual tension much better than most guys.

The guys who struggle the most - even though they've read a lot, too - are guys who STILL have a fuzzy concept of what sexual tension is.

That's why I believe (with every fiber of my being) that if a person:

(1) Has confidence in himself + (2) Has confidence that there is a SENSIBLE PROCESS out there, he will achieve anything his heart desires.

Here's the Sensible Process:

The idea is to focus more on doing things to increase her arousal a little bit, then do something to increase it some more, then do something to increase it some even more, then do something to increase it some even more...

Special Tip: If your partner gets you a huge passionate kiss after something you said and/or done, it would be very wise to take a few minutes to figure out what created that emotional impact that resulted in the aggressive kiss - even if you don't end up having sex with her - even if you two made plans to have sex later on and it didn't happen - even if the whole idea of trying to figure out what happened doesn't quite make sense to you. If you get in the habit of going through this process, you will eventually have a database of 'sexual tension tactics'.

And the cool part is - And again, the guys who get amazing results understand this CLEARLY -- is 'getting a woman sexually aroused' is really all about doing a "recipe" (or formula) of sexual tension increasers.

And 95% of the time, if you would have done just ONE of those things all by itself, it wouldn't have FULLY gotten her aroused.

I really hope that makes sense.

So the idea is to keep doing something that worked (to get her mildly turned on) and then doing something else like that - along with something - along with something- along with something...until she is FULLY SEXUALLY AROUSED!

That's.
How.
It.
Works.

It's not rocket science.

You see, for some guys you have to teach them the whole “do something to increase sexual tension — then keep doing more stuff” approach, because too many guys were looking for the ONE MAGIC METHOD to getting a woman turned on...

And it doesn't work like that...

Here's another analogy (or way of looking at it)....

And I've talked about this before...

For most women, oral sex provides the easiest means for orgasm. And yet, there isn't ONE MAGIC LICK you could do that would make it so that she would cum after “one lick”...

...even if it was the best 'one lick' she ever received in her whole entire life!!!!

Instead, you have to give her a “sequence of licks” (even if you don't do them perfectly) if you want the ORGASMIC tension to build.

It works the exact same way with building SEXUAL tension. So it's to YOUR benefit to create a list of ST Tactics and then from there, test out a combination to see what happens.

Here's the cool:

There are different categories of tension building.

Let's go over 3 of hem...

ST Category #1. Things you do that affect a base emotion. For example, doing something to make her happy. Doing something to make her excited.

ST Category #2. Things you do that affect her psychologically. For example, the concept that we'll cover in this report later on.

ST Category #3. Things you do that affect her beliefs. [about you, about herself, etc.]

Let's go over a detailed way of building tension (psychologically).

For example, let's say you communicated to a woman (in some way) that other women found you to be desirable.

And you noticed that she starting to be affected by this message. Maybe she started to be more affectionate towards. Maybe she made a comment like, "there's something different about you".

Does that make sense?

Here is basic example - Let's say you are alone with a woman. The two of you are sitting down in the living room watching TV. (got the visual?) Deep down inside you want to have sex with her, but you don't where to start. You might start talking about how there is a woman at your job that has been showing you "extra attention" (this is just one example).

Ok... You might be thinking: "But CR, this will make her jealous. And that's bad!"

Let's pause the story for a second.

For the sake of communicating a consistent message, I might refer to things like this as "jealousy tactics" but I really like to refer to it as:

"Third Party Sexual Value Recognition" [TPSVR]

But that doesn't roll of the tongue too well...

Getting back to what we were talking about...

Let's say she (the observer) started to respond favorably to "seeing/visualizing" another woman (or other women) who consider you sexually valuable...

The question is WHY?

We're going to explore this.

<< And yes I have obsession with putting comments in parenthesis (I'm not sure when it started). >>

And as we explore this, you're going to learn a "trick" that will make you unstoppable.

Keep this mind: As far as any type of jealousy-created technique (or whatever you want to call it), you have to understand what makes it effective.

And in this case, the answer is deep-rooted in how value can be created (from a perception standpoint)...

Let's kick this off with an example. Let's say you placed an ad in the paper for the purpose of selling a car for $1000 bucks and 77 people showed up at your door the next day.

What does that tell you?

It means, the car is more valuable than $1000.

That means, you could end up getting, let's say $1800 for it (maybe)... typically the number of people (quantity) showing interest determines the how much value the item will have.

This works the same with women... except there is another layer:

Quality.

You see when you're selling a car the quantity drives up the price...

As you may know, "supply and demand" is pretty much a 'universal law' that humans respond to...

If you know this already, keep paying attention...

So getting back to this other layer (quality) - and how women respond to it -- let's say you're outside washing your car and your wife peeked out of the window and she observed 10 women talking to you.

They were smiling and touching you on the arm. They were giggling. From your wife's perspective, they were wrapped up in every word you said...

Think about it...

Do you think she is going to experience some emotional discomfort that indirectly assigns more value to you?

The answer is YES.

#1: To the degree that she is CONVINCED that these women legitimately are interested in you.

#2: You're being defined in a "sexual context". It's like telling a story about a made up person and then having something bad happen to him and watching her cry as if the guy was real. Well if the story defines him the right way, he takes on the ENERGY of that person.

Even.
Though.
He's NOT REAL!

So when she looks out of the window, her perception (her version of reality - based on her perceptual filters) CREATES a sexy version of you.

The concept of framing is so powerful, that certain actors who play "bad guys" are often hated by the public!

And yeah I know, people can be stupid at times (lol), but the truth is our unconscious mind can be influenced by simple predictable factors.

That's one of the reasons why getting women turned on can be so $%&$ fun!

Getting back to the example...

If your wife looked out of the window, let's just say there's a good chance that she would respond (favorably) to seeing other women showing interest in you in a way that naturally assigns you value...

It can not be denied.

It's like seeing 77 people showing interest in your $1000 and not coming to the conclusion that

"Wow. This car is more sexually valuable than I initially realized." (LOL)

By the way, have you ever brought out up an embarrassing story that happened to your wife (or any woman you're talking to) just to be funny and you noticed how ANGRY she got...

Even though it's something that happened like 3 years ago!! (You're thinking; It's in the past. Big deal.)

But.....

The female brain.

Is.

Very.

Responsive.

To.

Stories.

They read romance novels (stories that get them horny).

They like to gossip (exchange juicy stories).

Women love stories.

I asked my wife what made you fall in love with me. I was expecting her to say "You're so amazing just thinking about you gets me so wet and turned on"

Nope!

Instead she said: "Because of the Roach Story you told me." I'm thinking WHAT?????!!! (basically, I told her a silly bedtime story about roaches - where one special roach [the chosen one] was able to do the impossible and get the crumbs that no other roach could get and it ended up saving the nation of roaches.)

Let's put it all together... You see, when you're outside washing your car and she observes 10 women talking to you. She's affected on two levels:

The supply and demand level.

The story level.

<< Both are VERY powerful - especially for the creative guy who knows other factors to mix in. >>

And since this is a case where your value is in the form of your desirability (based on the response of these women)... you have now magically increased your sexual value (at a minimum, your short-term sexual value. I've talked about the importance of ST-SV in other reports.)

And remember - because we didn't go into detail about it - the other layer is quality.

Remember?

If not, we'll explain it now.

Let's pretend things are slightly different...

In this case, your wife now sees 10 very attractive women (quality) responding to you in the same way...

Do you see how the value would go up even more? Do you see how you can use the other layer to further increase your sexual value?

That's the beauty of using "jealousy tactics". Oh excuse me, I mean "Third Party Recognition Sexual Value Enhancement Strategies" (LOL)

Ok... let's move on...

Doing it is fun. It's safe. It's effective. It's testable. It works.

But let's go even deeper!

"CR what about me being alone with the female. And the two of us are sitting down in the living room watching TV???"

I haven't forgotten you my friend...

Just listen. Remember - with females, the other layer is quality!

There's a difference between the 400lb neighbor next door that flirts with you and the new college cheerleader that moved in across the street that flirts with you.

Not to sound like a tagline from a 1980's grocery store commercial, but "Quality Makes A Difference!"

If you are selling a car, the value increase is based purely on QUANTITY - (the more people showing interest - the more valuable the car.)

QUALITY does not matter. You could care less how ripped their abs are or what kind of suit they're wearing...

Right?

Quality doesn't really matter when you're selling a car.

There's a difference between her looking out the window and seeing 1 woman showing interest in you (as you washed your car), than if there were 10 women showing interest. [Quantity increases value.]

There's also a difference between her looking out the window and seeing 10 women showing interest in you (as you washed your car), than if there were 10 smoking hot women showing interest.

Not to sound like a tagline from a 1980's grocery store commercial, but "Quality Makes A Difference!"

And yeah I know I've talk about this before, but I hope it makes even better sense with the car selling analogy...and car washing analogy...

There have been a few people that said things to me like jealousy doesn't work on Lisa...

Or Marie doesn't respond to jealousy techniques...

And the answer is: You are not doing it right and/or you don't have enough base value.

It should be a can't miss tactic for increasing your sexual value!

That would be like placing an ad in the paper for a car you are trying to get rid of priced at $7000 - where the next morning you have 90 people outside looking at the car (showing interest) – all 90 inspecting the car at the same time – and you end up selling it for $7000.

And then making the comment: "Supply and Demand" doesn't work for ME.

That's why one of the factors was 'believability'. That's why we said (in the beginning) that if you were watching your car, and your wife (or gf) didn't BELIVE the 10 girls were showing interest in you, then it's not going to affect her.

To me, the best strategy is to IMPROVE in a real way. For example, if you started to have a better outlook on life. And let's say you made the decision to laugh more, appreciate life more, improve yourself in many ways, be more respectful, be more helpful, be more aggressive with your goals....chances are, people are going to notice a difference in you.

Chances are, at some point a few female co-workers may take notice. This could lead to a REAL STORY of a woman flirting with you. And then you could end up telling that story to your wife.

Even if your wife also noticed the changes in you, it still makes sense to leverage your value in many creative ways that's in alignment with how the female "story-loving" brain responds to thing...

Does that make sense?

Some people will make up stories to leverage the power, but 'being yourself and being real' can also be seen as a powerful technique.

Just like some guys will attempt to 'pretend to be busy' using scarcity of time as a means of being value. In other words, they'll be sure not to call her everyday.

But, it's more effective to BECOME A GUY who is too busy to call her everyday.

It's always a good idea to understand core principles, because the biggest (and most dangerous) problem is putting something in perspective the wrong way.

For example, saying "my wife doesn't respond to jealousy" is like saying "I can't sell a car for more than the asking price when a bunch of people are showing interest in the car."

When we (as earthlings) see others interested in a particular item, we experience a psychological response that makes us assign value to it.

Again, be sure to leverage stories. So if you get a compliment at work, tell your partner about it!

You (talking to her): "The new girl at work told me I look sexy today!"

You can call it making her jealous. You can call it whatever you want. But in it's raw form, it is a strategic testimonial.

There is nothing wrong with having a strategy.
There is nothing wrong with testimonials (if they are real).

I use them. Large companies use them. Churches use them.

Let's move on.

Let's look at things in the opposite direction... (and for guys, this may be a little scary)

It could explain why a previous lover immediately lost interest.

Of course, we will return to our car-selling analogy.

If you placed an ad in the paper for a car for $7000, and for 30 days no one showed up in front of your door (no one showed interest) in your car, then what does that mean?

First of all, you might have to drop the price to $6000.

Ok, let's say you do that...

30 more days – zero people in front of your door showing interest in your car.
You drop the price to $4000...

30 more days – zero people in front of your door showing interest in your car.
You drop the price to $1000...

30 more days – zero people in front of your door showing interest in your car.
You drop the price to $500...

30 more days – zero people in front of your door showing interest in your car.
You drop the price to $0...

30 more days – zero people in front of your door showing interest in your car.

STOP!!!

Pop Quiz time Boys and Girls!! Yaahhh!!!! (queue the 1970's cheesy game-show music)

Pop Quiz: What is the value of the car? $7000 or $0?

(scroll down for the answer)

Neither.

Answer: If you drop the price down to $0 and still no one wants it, then the value is less than $0.

Which means no one is attracted to the car, because no one is showing interest in the car.

That means people are repulsed by the car, because no one is showing interest in the car.

That means you would have to pay someone to take the car (And in real life, this happens all of the time).

Question (answer fast!): How many days have you gone without your girlfriend/wife (woman you're interested in) getting the impression that other women are showing interest in you?

If you have a woman that explained to you why she just doesn't understand why she isn't sexually attracted to you, then think about how days have you been running an unanswered ad.

How often does she experience Third Party Sexual Value Recognition?

Does she ever experience (or hear about) other women showing interest in you?

Remember – women love attention. You can make her jealous over other women that she will never know, women in your dreams, cartoon characters, old girlfriends from 10 years ago, movie stars that you will never meet...

If she thinks you are spending too much time doing something, give "it" a female name and personify it.

I was on my old laptop for many hours one day and she says put Eugene (the name I gave it. Yeah it's a male's name. I wasn't thinking at the time. Go ahead and make your jokes) down and come over here.

I looked up and she was wearing lingerie. After a short conversation, it was obvious that she became jealous of me giving too much attention to my laptop.

<< Reverse Testimonial: HP Laptops suck! >>

So you can give things (your car, your computer, etc.) a female name a use that as a mechanism for value enhancement. (LMSO!)

Why not take it a step further and give it a famous female's name - something that induces a visual.

Call it "Megan Fox" or "Beyonce".

The point is there is no excuse for not becoming very skilled in this area, because the enormous flexibility...

Let's get back on track.

Personally there are certain reasons why a woman may seem unfazed by what may seem to be a technique that almost has to work every single time.

Let's quickly identify 4 of them.

Reason 1. The guy doesn't have Base Value

In general you can not efficiently & effectively build sexual value without some type of base value - my guess is that most husbands have some level of base value - otherwise she would have never married him...

In general, your base value is the "thing" that meets her conscious needs - like attractive enough, nice job, overall good guy, a non-criminal, etc...

There's another level to your Base Value that will sky-rocket you to becoming Super Incredibly Seductive and it's something that's easily overlooked.

It's self mastery – gaining confidence – removing fears – demonstrating will power... A list of things like that...

Base Value is important.

Looking at the extreme - it wouldn't matter how effective & masterful a homeless guy was at making a woman get the "visual" of 20 women going wild over him, because his base value is so incredibly low.

And even if it actually happened, it would be hard to convince her... so that moves on to reason number 2...

Reason 2. The story isn't believable.

It has to be believable.

You can tell her a story about how 50 super models came to your job and threw themselves at you all you want. If she doesn't believe you then you didn't create any sexual value.

*unless your strategy is more about inducing the visual so that she gets the "movie" (in the unconscious responses) in her head anyway...

Which brings us to a tip. And this is what you can do in the meantime if you don't have a REAL STORY to share.

Use "other stories" and then create a hypothetical situation.

For example:

You (talking to her): Did you hear what happened on the news last night. There was a woman who stabbed this snobby super model who thought she owned the world. Apparently the model walked up to the woman's husband and grabbed his cock and kissed him while he was walking with wife. It just so happened that the wife had a knife in her purse because of blah blah blah. So she stabbed her. I think that was going too far, but what would you do if that happened while we were out shopping?

See how it works? You induce the visual (along with the emotional impact) without it being rejected based on believability...

The visual in her mind is where all of the power is.

If you ever been insecure in a relationship before (I know I have), and you were wondering what she was doing. Then your insecurity was largely driven by the visuals in your mind – visuals of her screwing another guy – or visuals of her showing a strong interest in another man (even if they weren't real). More often than not, you were emotionally reacting to "pretend scenarios" (or "possible scenarios")(or "potential FUTURE situations)...

If there is one lesson you can learn from insecure people it's that IMAGINED VISUALS have the same impact as if the situation were REAL.

In this case, you can use a "hypothetical situation" to create the IMAGINED VISUAL.

You can use those stories (on a supply and demand level) to have other women showing interest in you.

You can then use that visual in so many ways. The more you understand about "getting her horny" and "what she responds to" the better.

Note: Placing too much value on the woman will destroy your sexual value by default. Regardless of how effective you are at everything else.

(Uh oh. We need to read that again! But this time - a little slower...)

So in general real scenarios are more effective because of the potential threat...

Reason 3. The woman might think that she can do anything she wants

Some guys try to quietly build their sexual value without addressing key factors and key beliefs.

Certain things can't be ignored.

And this kind of upsets some guys because it attacks a way of thinking that they're not prepared to adjust.

Have you ever told someone the RAW TRUTH and they just couldn't take it. There's a certain way they respond. You can tell they understand it on some level. Then wouldn't you know it. You find yourself IN a situation where someone is telling you (what they consider) the RAW TRUTH and you're not buying it. Yet, you're behaving just like the guy you were "trying to help".

Well, what we're about to cover may put some guys IN that situation where they have to challenge a "Way of thinking"...

Some guys believe that you should never leave the woman - no matter what.

You get married to a woman (which is really a decision)(and like all decision - you either made a good one or a bad one)(if you made a "bad one" you make adjustments and then learn from it).

Good decision-making skills could be thought of as a product of "learning from mistakes", "your strategy for decision-making (do you take the time to weigh the options)" and "intelligence" (which increases based on learning from BAD DECISIONS)...

So because all of that makes Super Sense to me, it's always been challenge to entertain the idea that CERTAIN DECISIONS are "magical" - because your brain is flooded with 10 billion extra neuron making it so you are FORCED to make the PERFECT DECISION...(i.e. when it comes to selecting a life-partner)

Basically, when guys make that statement, it has more to do with their confidence with moving on.

This is the case where the guy is being a pussy and she has him on Puppy Dog status. And he may not even realize how it happened. One day he is her hero – time passes – and now he has be broken down to a Puppy Dog Pussy Boy.

It can happen to any man.

One day the guy wakes up and he can feel that she has captured the power in the relationship.

In other words, she has so much power over him, other people can pick up on it with no problem. In essence, she has (intentionally or unintentionally) installed fear programs. She has reduced his confidence. She has made him more timid and soft.

It is the reason why it is important to increase your Base Value – read books on increasing your confidence. Read books on removing fear. Focus on what's amazing about you.

With all of that said, it brings us to the main point.

And that is: It is a very bad idea to have a female partner who does whatever she wants because she has no respect for the guy. A lot of times the guy unknowingly TURNS her this way because of years of "pounding her brain" with the message of:

I would never leave you.
You can do whatever you want and I will be right by your side.

Let's face it - if the woman has the belief that she can do any damn thing to you without any consequence, then a conversation about a sexy women giving you the sexy eyes at work will be meaningless!!!

(because she knows that you're SO ABSORBED WITH HER, that it just rolls off.)

I personally think it is healthy for the woman to "fight" and "earn" the guy throughout the relationship - in the appropriate ways of course. And it can be fun.

In fact, there are a large percentage of women where this is what they're primarily response to you.

Write this down:

“If the guy has little base value, the power of all seduction techniques and psychologically strategic conversations will be diminished greatly!”

And what I mean is somewhere in the near future I will create a seduction technique that I don't even know about at this time. Whatever it is, there will be a huge difference (in terms of results) between the following people who use it.

- A guy who is fearless and powered up with confidence
- A Crack Head – or anyone with poor will power and focus
- You

All 3 have the ability to increase their base value!

The greater the Base Value, the easier and more effective seduction techniques will be.

And the easier it will be to get her in a competitive mindset. So every guy should want a woman who is competitive and energized.

Because competition is the functioning mechanism in Value Creation...

Think about that for a second.

So in other words, the 77 guys bidding on your car are in a competition and that process creates the value...

There is a competition aspect to the "supply and demand" that most people never acknowledge.

I hope this makes sense.

200 women placing bids on eBay for beanie babies paying $200+ for them are in a competition...

And a woman who is "too relaxed" (too laid back – and in non-competitive mood) in the relationship will normally end up not respecting her husband – even if it's on a subtle level.

She has installed pockets of fear in his brain.

He is afraid of what she might say if he says this.
He is afraid of what she might say if he says that.
He is afraid of what she might do if he says this.
He is afraid of what she might do if he says that.

Base Value is created by increasing self confidence, eliminating fears, having good character and compassion, increasing will power, developing self-mastery, etc...

Surprisingly the woman who is "too relaxed" expects to be put in her place; otherwise the guy will lose TONS of base value and sexual value by default.

Some women will "see how much they can get away with" because on some level she is trying to figure out how much value the guys has...

It's a SVLT (Sexual Value Litmus Test!).

Reason 4. She can sense your intentions...

She knows you are up to something with your story or method of creating jealousy...

So those are the 4 things that might not allow a guy to get the benefits from a value-increasing supply & demand technique...

As far as ways to be more effective...make sure she believes it...

I personally don't come up with stories that are completely false, but if I'm trying to make her jealous, I might add some "flavor" to real live events if it needs some help...

Like we are out somewhere recently and she said: "Was that woman flirting with you?" And I said, "You noticed, too?"

I didn't think that the woman was at all but why not leverage the moment.

In 3.5 seconds you can magically turn nothing into something.

Here's an email that contains a female confessing that she thinks the guy is great, but she thinks she would really be attracted to him if he was with another woman. If you don't feel like reading the whole email, just skip to the part in red.

I have read half of this ebook and already my mouth is dropping open just because everything I have been doing and done with my significant and obviously past relationships was wrong and obviously unsuccessful.

I realized that I am an EH.

I read that list of traits within the EH profile and it was me to a T almost. I grew up with 4 sisters and a mom and have always related to women well except in boyfriend girlfriend situations and any relationships I have had have always ended sort of quickly or before they really get started. I am then left in the dust and they generally move onto their next "jerk" and in some cases they return to me to cut my guts out and complain about the loser they just dated. The pain of that sort of situation caused me to stop that scenario from happening again.

I understand now the concept of my own Sexual Value and I have begun working on improving it just by stating the simple scripts you provided. I know I have a ways to go but I am the EH nice guy who does not get it often that is for sure. I think it has a lot to do with my upbringing and I always saw the crap my sisters and female friends went through with the guys they dated and I never wanted to be like those guys. Anyway enough about that for now.

I am in a relationship right now that is friends but we have almost gone over the line of friendship on one occasion and this woman has told me before on a couple occasions that I do have everything she would want in a man but something is missing. I believe after reading a lot of the information...she sees me as a friend and not in a sexual context.

She actually stated to me, "I don't know, maybe I would be more attracted to you if you were with someone else".

We connect on a friendship level, a spiritual level, a sense of humor level and this also includes an erotic sense of humor too. We are very playful and sarcastic with each other in a fun way. We both have very similar thoughts or concepts on how a long-term relationship works and what it means to love someone.

It is a great caring friendship but it could be a great loving relationship too. She tells me I am an attractive man but sometimes she would like to "f" my brains out but she said those are times when I just happen to be there and she is horny.

So if I can tap into her brain and connect with her on that level and stimulate things in the right way I am sure I can be the guy she has dreamed about even if she did not know it was me, yet. I believe my intention is true also, I want to give her all those things she has dreamed about in a man because she deserves them as all people do. I do yearn for a connection like this with a woman where they are your best friend, confident lover and everything in between.

I apologize for going on a bit here but I have just experienced a sort of epiphany about myself in many ways. If I don't end up with this woman I will find another one but at the risk of sounding fairly tale-ish, she and I both believe people do enter our lives for purposes and reasons but in this world's reality maybe we have much more control than we give ourselves credit for and it is within us and not some sort of cosmic plan we are at the mercy of. Time will tell.

Thanks CR, if you can give a little direction my way that will be greatly appreciated, if not I understand. This information is awesome.

Thank you again!
Brad

hey brad every now and then a woman will say something that is dead-on in terms of what makes them find a guy sexually valuable when overall they tend to be surprisingly clueless about the whole thing... kinda like the movie where the little girl says mommy someone is watching me and come to find out there is ghost in the room with a shocked look on his face... it's one of the shocking and random things that makes you go wow, how did she know..

that's how i feel about this woman you are referring to when she said maybe if she dated someone else i would find you attractive...

that's a very basic way of creating value... when she sees that other women are SHOWING INTEREST in you...

-cr

It's that simple.

That's a break down of just ONE WAY to increase sexual tension.

Here's the recap:

1. Don't take the ONE MAGIC LICK approach. Figure out small things that work (even if they don't get her turned on individually - and stack them in various ways.
2. There are 3 Ways To Increase Sexual Tension
 - ST Way #1. Things you do that affect a base emotion. For example, doing something to make her happy. Doing something to make her excited.
 - ST Way #2. Things you do that affect her psychologically. For example, the concept that we'll cover in this report later on.
 - ST Way #3. Things you do that affect her beliefs. (about you, about herself, etc.)
3. Create real stories (or hypothetical situations) that portray as you as the desired guy (character).
4. Remember the lesson from insecure people: Imagined visuals can create a powerful emotional impact.

4. When this is done right, it works:

- on a 'supply and demand' level
- one a story level

5. Women love stories (romance novels, gossip, etc.).

6. Some acronyms are very long.

7. There are 4 reasons why a woman may not respond to your "Third Party SV Enhancement Tactics:

- Reason 1. The guy doesn't have Base Value. It's self mastery – gaining confidence – removing fears – demonstrating will power... A list of things like that...
- Reason 2. The story isn't believable.
- Reason 3. The woman might think that she can do anything she wants. Her value is so inflated that it's impossible to elicit a competitive mindset. Whenever a guy puts a woman too high on pedestal and/or he allows her to disrespect for too long, she feels too powerful. She may even laugh at the idea of another woman showing you interest.
- Reason 4. She can sense your intentions... In other words, she knows you're trying to "do something".

Take care... much success (as always)...

Keep things simple.

Warmest Regards,
CR James

